What the wealthiest do to protect their assets, and why we should do the same

A practical guide with options for efficient wealth structuring that demystifies the so-called “offshore jurisdictions” and explains the reasons for the existence of what are also known as “tax havens” and why they continue to be demonized by countries that take continued advantage of high taxes to finance ever-increasing expenditure –as well as by the supranational organizations that bring them together. The guide is also an essential reference for those seeking mechanisms to preserve the privacy of their assets in the “era of transparency”.

In these pages by Martín Litwak, many will be surprised at the reasons why this is no longer something important only to the wealthiest, but rather to any owner of property that is to be bequeathed to heirs and wishes to prevent them from being trapped inside the struggle between greedy tax systems and the contradictory laws of different jurisdictions.

He is an attorney-at-law in Argentina, the UK and the BVI. His expertise deals with wealth structuring and preservation for HNW and UHNW families and individuals, as well as fund structuring, international taxation, and WealthTech.

Throughout his lengthy professional career, Martín was awarded several prizes and has been part of multiple rankings of lawyers working in the areas where he is a specialist.

Apart from his activity as professor and keynote speaker, this entrepreneur has also authored three books and numerous articles for different columns.

This controversial advocate of offshore jurisdictions defines himself as a champion of tax competition, a guardian of privacy, and a promoter of wealth planning.

Martín is often a guest at TV and radio programs in Latin America and the US, and is the author behind various editorial columns in the media and endless articles included in specialized publications worldwide.
